

Dr. Jessica Marie Williams

Post-doctoral Fellow, Centre for Civil Society and Governance, The University of Hong Kong

Dr. Williams' research interests lie in environmental policy, collaborative governance and sustainability. Her doctoral research focused on the transboundary water security issues in South and Southeast Asia, in particular, the governance and management of the major river systems originating from the Tibetan Plateau. Her current focus is on the governance of rural areas and communities, with a focus on sustainability issues.